Team 11: A&W's Masala Veggie Burger Launch
Questions to answer:

A&W's Masala Veggie Burger rolls out nationwide due to record-breaking demand!

1. What was the campaign about:
   The campaign was about A&W's Masala Veggie Burger, a vegetarian burger with South Asian flavours. It has a crispy patty made with vegetables, Nanak paneer and spices, served with spicy piri-piri sauce. The burger was first sold only in Ontario. Because it sold out in many restaurants within a week, A&W made it available across Canada for $6 for a limited time.
2. What was the target population of the campaign:

The main target was South Asian vegetarians in Canada, who want a burger that tastes like home. The campaign also targeted other Canadians who like to try new and bold flavours. It started with customers in Ontario and later reached customers across the country.

3. What were the goals of the campaign (e.g., awareness, engagement, community building, lead generation, conversion): The main goal was conversion, which means driving sales. The low $6 price and the “limited time” message encourage people to buy quickly. A second goal was brand awareness. The press release presents A&W as an innovative brand that offers flavours from around the world, which can attract new customers to the brand.

4. What was one Key Performance Indicator (KPI) tracked in this campaign:

One KPI was sales. The press release says the burger “achieved record-breaking sales” and sold out in many restaurants within a week. This sales result was the reason A&W expanded the burger across Canada.

5. What was one overarching theme of the campaign (e.g., education, value proposition, social value, authenticity, sharing points of view): The main theme was authenticity. A&W partnered with Nanak Foods, a South Asian Canadian business, to create a burger with real South Asian taste. The campaign uses phrases such as “authentic taste” and “a taste of home” to build trust with South Asian customers. This theme also shows social value, because it supports a local Canadian business and shares South Asian food culture with more Canadians.
